I get like limited answersBy CustomerIm a healthcare consumer not a therapist - and have been to many alternative medicine therapists. One of the things Ive noticed is that whenever I ask a question about my health, I get like limited answers. For example, what do I have, and the needle person said stagnant energy in a meridian what the heck does this mean? Normally I wouldnt read this book which is more geared towards medical people, but Im really fascinated with the work Durazo is doing with magnetic therapy that I said, why notlets see what he has to say and I realized this is more than just information, its encouraging ALL alternative medicine therapists from all fields to use the law in order to better communicate with patients without fear of practicing medicine without a license.

How to Cure with Alternative Medicine without Government Interference An eye-opening look at the world of alternative medicine practitioners and a practical guide to helping them work fear-free under the US Constitution The results of medical doctors over-prescribing antibiotics has precipitated what the World Health Organization now calls a crisis in the treatment of common viruses, bacteria and infections. It has also contributed to an increased open-mindedness about alternative medicine. Sixty-two per cent of Americans aged 18 and over use some form of non-traditional medicine annually, according to survey conducted by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Yet the people who deliver such alternative healing as acupuncture, chiropractics, herbalism, biomagnetism, and homeopathy cannot practice freely in the public sector. They live in constant fear of facing criminal charges for practicing medicine without a license. Moses Durazo, certified biomagnetic practitioner and advocate, has figured out the way around this: go private. By forming Private Medical Membership Associations, he shows how alternative medicine practitioners can heal in peace, protected under the US Constitution. This well-reasoned, intelligently written book makes an excellent case for options in the highly controversial world of health care. About the Author: Moses Durazo, BA, HHP, CBP is a Certified Goizean Medical Biomagnetic and Alphabiotic Practitioner. He is an avid spokesperson and advocate for the alternative medicine industry in the United States and internationally. His previous book is How Magnets Saved My Life A Holistic Guide for Optimal Living.
