Not illustrated. 1881 Excerpt: ...Children advanced ii. real or personal estate shall account for advancements in realty or personalty. 3. The lineal descendants of any person deceased shall represent their ancestor. 4. Lineal descendants failing, the inheritance shall go to the collateral relations of the person last seized, being of the blood of the first purchaser, whether such person last seized derived the estate from the ancestor by descent, or by gift, devise, or settlement. 5. Where the person last seized is the first purchaser, or the blood of such purchaser is extinct, then the estate shall go to the collateral relation capable of inheriting the estate, whether of the maternal or paternal line. 6. Collateral relations of the half blood shall inherit equally with those of the whole blood, and the degrees of relationship shall be computed according to the rules of the common law. If there be no issue of the propositus, nor brother, nor sister, nor the issue of such, the estate shall vest in the father if living, and if not, then in the mother if living. 7. No inheritance shall descend to any person as heir of the propositus, unless he or she be in being at the death of the propositus, or be born in ten months after the death of such propositus. 8. If there be no other person who can inherit to the propositus, his widow shall inherit as his heir. 9. Aliens who would otherwise be heirs, shall not prevent others who are citizens from inheriting. 10. Illegitimates shall inherit from their mother, provided there be no legitimate children of such mother; but shall not claim, as representing their mother, any part of the estate of her kindred, either lineal or collateral. 11. Illegitimates shall be considered legitimate as between themselves and their representatives. And in case of the d..
