Emergency: A practical guide for your families in the event of injury or death:

This is a guide that every parent should read before spending another day away from your kids! Most of us have not planned at all for the time when we are not here. We plan for things that may never happen: fire and earthquake. We plan for things that are not particularly important: trips to the supermarket. We spend large amounts of time planning our childrens birthday parties and play dates. So why do we fail to plan for something guaranteed to happen: our eventual death? Its just a matter of time. The plans and preparations you make today will impact generations to come, and this guide is the beginning to understanding how quick and easy it is to do the right thing for the people you love most. This book is about living the best life you can, leaving the world a better place and setting the foundation for success for your spouse, children, and loved ones, no matter how long you live and no matter how much money you leave behind. In an easy-to-read story format, In Case of Emergency shows you how to plan and prepare for a serious injury or death.

About the Author Jacqui Brauman is the principal solicitor and director of Theobald Lawyers Pty Ltd t/a TBA Law. She has a Bachelor of Laws, Bachelor of Accounting, Advanced Diploma in Taxation Law, and a Masters in Applied Law (Wills and Estates). Jacqui also has an accredited specialisation issued to her by the Law Institute of Victoria in the area of Wills and Estates. Jacqui's primary focus in her wills and estate practice is to make sure young families know the consequences of not undertaking proper planning, and ensuring that their children are adequately protected, both physically and financially. Her message is simple: In a world of uncertainty, we cannot live with our heads in the sand. Instead, we can make sure that we don't leave a difficult mess behind us if something should happen. Then, hopefully, the plan never has to be implemented. But its better to plan for security than try to struggle during grief and loss.
