Nigel Miller : Last meal at Moor Inn: Death was presumed The young witnesses before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Last meal at Moor Inn: Death was presumed The young witnesses:

Last meal at Moor Inn: A short story about a teenager who receives a letter from a firm of solicitors out of the blue and learns something to her advantage which she can't understand. Death was presumed: A short story about attempts to trace the relatives of an elderly lady who died in a home and which ended up with unexpected and distressing consequences. Secret of the roof: a short story about a lady who had a problem about a family will and wonders if noises in the roof have any connection with that. The young witnesses: A short story about a teenager who has hardly any knowledge of law but attempts to write out a will for someone in extreme circumstances.
